IS YOUR LIVER INACTIVE?
What you most need is a remedy which has a direct and powerful action on that organ. For this purpose you should use only Mishler's Herb bitters.

And when Abraham and the people beheld the wonderful cures which were produced by this drink, Abraham said, 'My children must not suffer; give me drink to drink, and I will give it a name.'
And so Abraham drank, and said there was nothing like it, even in Sangamon county; that it was bitter to the lips, but good to the stomach; and because there were bitter times in fighting the masters of the plantations, it shall be called Plantation Bitters; and so it has been.
And the wonderful work which it has performed is witnessed at this day in every town, parish, village and hamlet throughout all the world.
And he said, 'Let it be proclaimed through the length and breadth of the land, from the valleys and mountain tops, that all who suffer from fevers, dyspepsia, weakness, loss of appetite, nervous headache, and mental depression will find relief through the Plantation Bitters. They add tone to the stomach, and brilliancy to the mind, of which I, O people am a living example.'

PETTICOATS AT THE BAR.—The Tribune, which is generally regarded as a progressive paper, has an article of recent date, under the above head, in which the writer attempts to sneer at woman's efforts, (as has often been done in the same paper of late) when taking part in the professions and other positions heretofore monopolized by men. It may all be in good taste and of sound judgment to treat one of the great questions of the day in such a manner, but for one who pretends to be on the side of reform and advancement, to treat this subject thus it looks a little inconsistent. "Petticoats at the bar" may sound very well in a grog shop, or read appropriately in some police Gazette, but a respectable paper should be ashamed of using such phrases. It may not be out of place to suggest here that the party which thus treats the woman question is the very one to have "petticoats at the bar," whenever it answers their purpose, whether the wearers are willing to appear at such tribunals or not. If a woman violates the law they will drag her before some unfeeling court, to there be tried by men, not one of whom has a spark of sympathy for her misfortune, no matter from what cause it arises. Or if she is not present as a party in court, woman is often forced to go there by officers, as witnesses, and if she refuses to respond to the summons fine or imprisonment, or both, are her doom. In many other cases we may find petticoats at the bar, and nobody thinks anything amiss of it. And if a woman hesitates to appear as witnesses on a trial, who is there more willing to abuse her than those who sneeringly talk of petticoats at the bar? As witness or prisoner she is liable to be compelled to appear among the roughest and most inhuman; at court, and then, possibly, be berated and abused by thoughtless lawyers. That is all right in the estimation of those who take that side of the question; but suppose a woman goes into court as a lawyer, or juror, or even as a judge, then the vials of their opposition are poured out on her, just as though she had no sense of right or justice, and unworthy to receive the courtesies of one of our race. Something better than such turning up of noses must meet this advancing reform before it can be put down.

Chicago is reported as hard to beat in any thing the citizens undertake. A merchant worth half a million has recently been assessed for $100,000 for breach of promise. A number of his love letters have been printed which are rare specimens of orthography and composition. Here are two of his original spells—arisiplace for erysipelas—geasus for Jesus.

The enemies of man's happiness do evil, and evil only. The friends of our race have a disposition to do good. As these enemies entail nothing but misery their services can be dispensed with, while the services of friends are ever welcome. In which list do we find the grogseller? Among the enemies of our brothers and sisters everywhere, for his works produce evil, only evil, and that continually.

The Nation's Defenders.

A subject that is, or ought to be, of great interest to the American people, is the mode of rewarding their soldiers who have so nobly fought, bled and suffered for them during the late lamentable war. The remnants of that heaven-inspired band, who have given us victory and peace—whose power has for the second time made and preserved us a nation—deserves at the hands of this nation something more than a mere empty acknowledgment of the services rendered.

We have have not the slightest intention to advocate anything in the shape of pensions—beyond that justly due to the soldier who has been wounded while wearing the uniform of his country, and wounded to a life-long injury. An advocacy for support to the maimed or crippled comrade cannot be needed, and the people who would refuse it are not worthy to be called a nation. But outside this category are thousands—whose services during the late war call loudly for recompense.

There can be nothing done for the dead but lament them; and in this regard the people has performed its duty. Green garlands have been liberally strewed on their graves, and will be as long as there is a heart in these United States stirred by the spirit of patriotism. No fear but there will be that to the end of all time. But the living should also be remembered; and in a way that they may not have cause to regret having imperilled their lives, under an inspiration of courage and patriotism, comparable to anything heretofore known in the history of mankind.

With this doctrine the most lukewarm of patriots will agree, and he would be the basest of traitors who should differ from it.

It becomes simply a question then, as to how this reward should be given. We will not insult the soldier of liberty by speaking of a pension; for he would not be a soldier of liberty who would not meet such an offer with refusal, if not with indignation. He knows how such a system once initiated, would work; how the increased tax required to sustain it would weigh upon his fellow countrymen as on himself. He can perceive the baneful effects of such a precedent, once established; among others, the encouragment thereby given to adopt the profession of arms as a profession.

In our opinion, the most sublime spectacle the world has yet witnessed—certainly the grandest recorded in history—is that of a million men, armed cap-a pie—in full panoply of war, in one hour, and with one voice exchanging their warlike weapons for the implements of peace—returning to their desks, workshops, plows—never more to forsake them, unless summoned forth by the dire necessity of defending their common country against the assault of the invader!

Was it not a sublime spectacle? Is it not a thing to be talked of to all time? None but a republican people could have produced it; for only they would have been permitted. A monarchical nation, once armed and accoutered after the same fashion, could never again have laid aside their arms or cast off their accoutrements; never more could they have returned to the practices of peace. There is no instance of it in history—from the time of the real Cæsar, to the days of his ridiculous travesty by the Gallic charlatan.

And yet in this unparalleled, and apparently wonderful chapter of human history, there is nothing that is not perfectly natural. It is the very course we should have expected from the republic; nay, that we predicted, long before the struggle had reached its termination. It is a thing of no little pride to us, that we can point to printed words foretelling this event by many, many years. Well do we remember how, over our after dinner wine, Lord Tom Noddy used to twit us about the failure of republican institutions, as proved by the internicine and sanguinary strife then progressing on this side of the Atlantic.

Not only in England, but all over Europe, it was a fixed and foregone conclusion, as it was a heartfelt wish and hope. There were times when the hope vacillated—gloomy days these were in England—times when there was a fear, that after all the republic might survive the shock. On these occasions Lord Tom, although sadly depressed in spirits, was still cheered by the argument that assisted in sustaining him. A forlorn hope, it is true, but better that than none. His reasoning that, even if the American republic should not be broken up by the war, this would at least leave traces that would in time destroy it. Although still united, it would no longer remain a republic, but would certainly become either a monarchy or military dictatorship. How could two millions of soldiers be contented to turn their swords into harvesting-hooks, or be satisfied with less than the enjoyment of that imperial power they had reaped by their rapiers?

His lordship did not know the republican soldier as we. He reasoned from wrong data; mistaking the heroic defenders of liberty for its hireling assailants—the same to which he had all his life been accustomed.

In truth it was a sublime spectacle, this universal and unopposed disarmament—exceeding in surprise all the pantomimic changes and transformations ever known upon earth. And it is a great question, too, worthy of more words than we have here space to spend upon it. It comes before us now, only in connection with that other question: how are we to reward our patriotic soldiers—they who have risked life, not to make—for this was done before their time—but to preserve us us the greatest nation now upon the earth?

To us the thing appears perfectly simple. It may be done without expense, or in the slightest degree risking the perils that spring from a pension system. The government has in its gift tens of thousands of offices—enough to give employment to every soldier who has proved himself deserving of it. To whom are they due, if not to the defenders of the country?

This would not be reward but only compensation. It is simply pay for work still continued; with on one side no reflection upon the services of the past, and upon the other no feeling of obligation in its acceptance.

We know that there are some thus employed, but not enough. And we know some of them personally, captains, colonels, generals, who have commanded brigades during the war—led them through the thickest of its leaden hail—ay, some, who by our own side twenty years ago passed through a like shower in Mexico—we know more than one of these who are now toiling hardly, contentedly, even honestly, as lumble inspectors of customs of the port of New York! And above them, in superior position, are the people, who during the war were hidden in holes—dim, dingy satellites thrown off from the political wheel—holding and exercising authority over these brave men!

The fact is a national shame, too ludicrous to be treated in a rational manner.

Still it behoves this nation to give it a rational consideration. It is its duty to do so.

If they do we may safely predict that the meritorious republican soldier, who, in his modesty claims neither bounty nor pension, will at least receive civic employment, commensurate with his merits and services.

Both have been great, and for both God will in time reward him. But God will be angry with those who in this world refuse to lend a helping hand to the men sent forth, as he sent Gabriel and his angelic host, to execute his own decrees of justice and regeneration.—Onward, for July.

Where Wood Comes From.

If we were to take up a handful of soil and examine it under the microscope, we should probably find it to contain a number of fragments of wood, small broken pieces of the branches, or leaves, or other parts of the tree. If we could examine it chemically, we should find yet more strikingly that it was nearly the same as wood in its composition. Perhaps, then, it may be said, the young plant obtains its wood from the earth in which it grows. The following experiment will show whether this conjecture is likely to be correct or not. Two hundred pounds of earth were dried in an oven, and afterward put into a large earthen vessel; the earth was then moistened with rain-water, and a willow tree, weighing five pounds, was planted therein. During the space of five years the earth was carefully watered with rain-water or pure water. The willow grew and flourished, and to prevent the earth being mixed with fresh earth, or dirt being blown upon it by winds, it was covered by a metal plate full of very minute holes, which would exclude everything but air from getting access to the earth below it. After growing in the earth for five years, the tree was removed, and on being weighed was found to have gained one hundred and sixty pounds. And this estimate did not include the weight of the leaves or dead branches which in five years fell from the tree. Now came the application of the test. Was all this obtained from the earth? It had not sensibly diminished; but in order to make the experiment conclusive, it was again dried in an oven, and put in the balance. Astonishing was the result: the earth weighed only two ounces less than it did when the willow was first planted in it! yet the tree had gained one hundred and sixty pounds. Manifestly, then, the wood thus gained in this space of time was not obtained from the earth; we are therefore compelled to repeat our question, Where does the wood come from? We are left with only two alternatives: the water with which it was refreshed, or the air in which it lived. It can be clearly shown that it was not due to the water; we are consequently, unable to resist the perplexing and wonderful conclusion—it was derived from the air.

Can it be? Where are those great ocean spaces of wood, which are as old as man's introduction into Eden, and wave in their vast and solitary luxuriance over the fertile hills and plains of South America, were those obtained from the thin air? Were the particles which unite to form our batle ships, Old England's walls of wood, ever borne the world about, not only on wings of air, but actually as air themselves? Was the firm table on which I write, the chair on which I rest, the solid floor on which I tread, and much of the house in which I dwell, once in a form which I could not as much as lay my finger on, or grasp in my hand? Wonderful truth! all this in air.

An Amusing Scene at a Theater.

The occasion was the benefit night of Mis Phillips. That lady was playing Jane Shore, in Maturin's tragedy of that name. The house—and the Front street Theater is a large one—was crowded. In the first tier, on one side, in a front seat of the box adjoining the proscenium, was conspicuous the burly form of a sailor, with a large, red face. He was well known to many of the audience as Captain Hugg, the prosperous owner and master of an eastern shore oyster schooner. He was watching the play with intense interest, and feeling, as was manifest from the tears that coursed down his weather beaten cheeks. He also frequently placed his right hand nervously upon his left breast; but whether this action had any connection with his sympathy for the heroine of the play, or was the result of prudent concern for the wallet full of Baltimore and Ohio railroad shinplasters he was known to carry in that region, the sequel will show.

It is proper to state here, that, although the date of these occurrences was long after the money panic of 1837 (known as the shinplaster era) had subsided, and the banks had fully resumed specie payments, yet the Baltimore and Ohio railroad company, by some financial legerdemain, kept the community flooded with one and two dollar notes, which were almost the only currency used in the smaller trade transactions of the city.

The play had proceeded to the scene in the last act, where Shore's treacherous wife, (late the omnipotent favorite of Edward the Fourth, but now by Gloster's cruel edict, an outcast wanderer in the streets, with none to give her food or shelter), comes upon the stage utters a heart-rending [illegible] and falls exhausted with starvation and fatigue, to the ground. The accomplished actress proceeded in the harrowing relation of her woes, [illegible] were so rapt by her [illegible] and ma-

Temperance Movements.

It may not be known to many, who are readers of general news, and claim to be posted in all that is worth knowing and is daily transpiring, that the temperance men are at work politically, by county and state conventions, and contemplate holding a national convention at Chicago sometime in September. A state convention for Ohio is to be held at Mansfield, commencing on Wednesday the 14th of this month—the call issued by the state executive committee—for the purpose of nominating candidates for state officers. The temperance men of Maine already have candidates for state offices in the field, and other states are taking similar ground. The advocates of political temperance in Columbiana county have held a convention, but we have not heard the result of their action, though no doubt they have an independent ticket. There are very obvious indications that the earnest, sincere friends of temperance are not satisfied with the action, or rather non-action of political parties now existing, upon this growing and vital, living issue. The history of political parties, especially after they have attained power, presents few if any instances of that spirit of progress beyond that which brought them into existence and they seem to wish to stop there, as if what they were created to accomplish was the end of all advancement. Hundreds and thousands of sincere and honest republicans of these days take this position in regard to their party, and feel aggrieved that temperance men see proper to aggress upon untrodden ground in this direction. We may safely take this position, that parties are made for men, and not men for parties. Assuming this self evident truth, by what system of reasoning can it be shown that the temperance political movement is a wrong one? A consciousness of right should prompt every man in his actions when he votes as well as when he prays.

But our good republican friends, at least many of them, will gravely warn us that, in making this new issue we shall endanger the success of the party, and possibly place their opponents in power, while there is not even a remote chance for the success of a temperance ticket. All these contingencies may follow, and suppose they do, on whom will the responsibility rest? Are men to be held culpable of doing wrong when trying to speak their principles at the ballot box, while other men, of the same party, are known to be holding their convictions in abeyance lest their opponents may secure a few petty offices? Look these questions squarely in the face, and let every one answer as his judgment dictates.

But it is assumed that the republican is the temperance party, and that it will carry out the wishes of the friends of temperance. Much as we are attached to the principles of this party, and willing as we are to give it credit for doing that glorious and noble part it has done in behalf of freedom, by unwillingly, very often, following the advice of the radical friends of liberty, still we have no proof that its leaders, and those to whom the people look for advice and leadership in all that is just and praiseworthy, have either sympathised with or done anything entitling them to credit in behalf of the temperance cause. Many of their candidates may be faithful temperance men, and individually have done much to promote the cause, but where is their leg- in this respect, and what say county plattorms in its fav e books give no evidence, platforms evince no signs in this direction.

In this war ience of anti slavery men is can be said or written ag- gress. Every argume- against political temperance a thousand times exploded and false when advanced by just as earn whigs of other days in favor of their cause as against political abolition, as can now be produced by republicans against political temperance. Every point is familiar to those who passed through the ordeal, from the time James G Birney received 6000 votes, in 1840, in the nation, to that era of 1860, when Mr. Lincoln was elected on anti-slavery principles.

Suppose, in this crusade, that the democrats see proper to affiliate with temperance men, in order to secure a few little offices, and they succeed in doing so, is it not plain that when they do so it is at the expense of their party organization? Whole armies of the best democrats in the land deserted the party, when they saw their leaders were determined to overthrow a democratic form of government, and under that organization they will never again rise into power as a national party. If, now, the temperance political party secure more hosts of the same men, it will be still more prostrated, and farther beyond the hope of political resurrection.

Taking this view of the question it will be the best and wisest policy of the republican party, for its own perpetuity, and to keep abreast with the reforms of the day, to adopt this new plank in their creed in order that they may live for evermore. Otherwise death may supervene, while the party is reaching for life amid the fumes of whisky and lager.

Fourth of July at Orrville.

Saturday, July 3, was celebrated for the fourth at Orrville by what is termed a horsefair on the Orville fair grounds. The day set in with rain; the clouds having a threatening aspect for some time, caused the attendance to be rather small in the forenoon, with but very few ladies present.

The afternoon was very pleasant with a beautiful breeze, and a goodly attendance of ladies and gentlemen. The half mile circle track was in excellent condition, the little rain in the morning adding much to the efficiency of the course, and durability of the horse.

Every thing passed along well until the middle of the afternoon when the Wooster roughs pitched in and quite a large number of fights was the result. In fact, at one time it seemed as if a riot was evident from the many different pugilistic strokes, and free use of clubs, &c, with many a wounded head and bloody smeller.

At one time several of the Wooster roughs singled out one of the police (who was endeavoring to quell the muss and restore peace,) causing him to beat a hasty retreat, feeling the effect of clubs and stones as he ran finding his way into the office, at which moment the secretary took up a base ball club, declaring the man that entered, would be killed, had the effect to stop the would-be murderers, and save the life of the young officer, who made his final exit from the ground. It is strange that there is no law in Wooster that will reach these scamps who make it a point to attend all the public meetings held at Orrville, for the express purpose of getting up a row, marring the peace and pleasure of the celebrations, and injuring the character of Orrville. They are a disgrace to all civilized people, and to the lowest ramparts of Satan's empire.

The Velocipede race came off with but little enthusiasm from the sensible, and the institution was denounced the biggest humbug of the age.

The trotting and pacing was excellent, manifesting a great amount of skill in training and driving, except in class 1st and 3d, which may be said that it was no race trotting whatever, nothing but an old woman go-to meeting gait, the parties having entered into the arrangement previous to the trot. The pacing was very fine and well matched between Shackelford, owned by F. Price, and bay mare Soap, owned by Jule Rice of Wooster. Shackelford being the winner by great odds in the forenoon when the Rice mare, Soap, was under the saddle, but in the afternoon pace, Soap went in harness, showing herself a fair match for Shackelford, by lapping up well on him every round evidently pacing the greatest distance.

The trotting in class fourth between s. horse Chuck and s. horse Harry, was good. Chuck being the winner handsomely, Harry losing very much in breaking, while Chuck is quite good on the break.

The trotting in class fifth was excellent; the contestants were Chuck, Red Robin, and a black stallion from Millersburgh. Considerable of betting took place on this race, Red Robin and the black stallion being the favorites. But Chuck showed great pluck, putting forth renewed energy, gaining the race, (best two in three, owing to the storm in the evening) nicely, reaching far ahead of the expectations of the most sanguine.

Below we give a summary of the races just as they came off:

DEINHURDSTEIN.

At a regular meeting of Sippo Lodge No. 48, I. O. O. F., held Monday evening July 5th, the following officers were installed for the current term: S. S. Whisler, N. G.; F. H. Snyder, V. G.; J. Brascher, R. S., J. B. Wert P. S.; N. S. Russell, Treas. The order in this vicinity is in a prosperous condition.

The Painkiller doctors were here one or two evenings last week, promising to make short work of the aches and pains incident to suffering humanity. Whether they killed any of these pains or not we have not heard, but they seemed to sell considerable of their stuff, and made the visit pay.

The Mahoning Register, now published by Hull, Hudson & Co., at Youngstown, always an excellent paper, has just been enlarged to nine columns a page. This is decided evidence of the appreciation in which this paper is held by its patrons.

Mrs Ridinger, of East Liverpool, prosecuted John Grafton, a liquor seller of that place, for damages sustained in selling her husband intoxicating liquors. The case was tried before a jury, and after a trial occupying nearly a whole June day, the result was, a verdict of $26,33 and costs against the gregseller. The laws of Ohio if enforced against the drunkard making business by those suffering therefrom, would soon make it a poor trade if every violation was prosecuted. The same laws are in force here that exist at East Liverpool.

We are under obligations to Mr Kimball, general ticket agent, and to Mr McCullough, superintendent of the P & Chicago R R for passes over this and the P & Cleveland roads.

Mr R Zielley, who was many years one of the active and energetic citizens of this place, has recently established himself in the livery business at Akron. When he left the American house we were sure that Mr Z would soon be in business somewhere; and he has shown good judgment in selecting Akron, one of the live, enterprising cities of this region, for the scene of his operations.

Important Fact.

We see that persons of strong constitutions, and young, suffer for days with pains of the limbs, loss of appetite and fever, who suddenly get well after a chollic followed by slimy bilous stools. The relief produced by these evacuations were the original guide to the idea and practice of purgation, and which when enforced by Brandreth's Pills, always benefits, usually cures, and often prevents disease, especially scarlet fever and diseases of a similar character,

I L Cook, publisher of the State Banner, Bennington, Vt, says Brandreth's Pills cured him of dyspepsia, after being afflicted with it over five years. His friends and doctors considered his recovery impossible: but six boxes of Brandreth's Pills restored his health perfectly.

A young lady of Mount Pleasant was sorely troubled with Tape-worm. All advice and medicine failed to help her. She had no rest. Thin, care-worn and unhappy, she looked the picture of misery. At last she concluded to try Crandreths Pills. In one year she took seventy-two boxes. They brought away, according to her computation, over two hundred yards of tape-worm. At length all her bad symptoms left her: she slept and ate naturally, and her health became fully restored.

The Latest Medical Discovery of the Age.
A Medicine that is Warranted to Cure,

And has no rival aside from surgical interferences, and then it proclaims itself the victor. This medicine has been thoroughly tested during the past three years, to satisfy all familiar with its merits, that it is not only a palliative, but that it actually removes the disease itself. The

Eureka Pile Remedy
OR BRAZILIAN OIL

is not only used locally (as principally all remedies, heretofore have been) but is also administered internally, which is the only rational theory, as the primary object in the cure of any disease, is first to remove the pain and then remove the cause. This is more readily accomplished by regulating the liver and kidneys, and imparting health and vigor to the mucous membrane of the whole alimentary canal. Beside the medicine is specific in its action, completely controling the circulation of the blood in the hemorrhoidal vessels. We warrant our compound to be purely vegetable. Simple and harmless in its action, as the most delicate tolerate it well. It corrects deranged neutrition or deficient circulation of the blood. In short, it makes the palid cheek bloom like the rose by imparting health and vigor to the whole system.

DR. C. W. ROBACK,

Dear Sir:—Permit me to say in relation to your Scandinavian Blood Pills and Blood Purifier, that I have used several boxes and bottles, and have found their effects on my system to be all that is claimed for them in your advertisements. I have also seen the effects of your Pills upon a child four or five years old, in expelling worms from the bowels.—One dose given the child, confined to the bed, and apparently very sick, caused the worms to come away from it in great numbers, and they were found crawling and scattered all about. The child thus relieved recovered immediately, and is now well and hearty.

"RIVERSIDE"
Lots For Sale.

That beautiful tract of land known as the FAIR GROUND,
on the bluff west of Massillon, and on the western bank of the Tuscarawas river together with the adjoining lands has just been divided up into town lots, which are recorded as the Riverside Addition to the town of Massillon.

The lots are of good size and will be sold at such easy terms of payment as to place a home within the reach of all. The county of the location is unsurpassed, and we believe it is a conceded fact that a location on the west bank of a running stream of water is always more healthy than one on the east bank.
It is apparent to all that the business and population of Massillon are very rapidly increasing; it is also apparent that public attention is directed to the west side of the river as the most desirable point for a home now in the market, or that probably ever will be in the market again. We think therefore that it is safe to predict that in a very few years this grand addition
RIVERSIDE,
Will be covered over with dwelling houses, which will be occupied by a large proportion of the busy citizens of the city of Massillon.
Every man who has a family or ever expects to have one ought to have a home on his own right; then he will be independent, if not rich. A better opportunity will never again be offered of securing one so desirable, so cheap, and so easily paid for.
Also a very desirable out lot, of about eight acres, adjoining Massillon on the Canton road, will divide well into three or four pasture lots. Also some beautiful lots in the east part of the city.
The plots may be examined, and lots selected at my store. [292] P. C. ALBRIGHT

A Burglar Shot

On the premises of Mrs. F. P. Church, and Mr. T. P. Pease. A vindication of the right of the citizen to defend his house.

For two or three months past the residents of a portion of the first, third and fourth wards, have been molested and very much annoyed in the enjoyment of peace and quiet at their dwellings. The dwellings of Mr Upham, in the first ward, south of Main, Mrs Church, and Mr Pease, corner of Main and Cedar, Mrs Whitehead, west side of Prospect and Mrs Karthaus, at the north end of Prospect, just outside of the city limits, have all been entered by burglars and thieves in the night season, within the period we have named, and it seems really to have become a question whether our citizens are to enjoy their habitations. The event which transpired on Friday evening, will, we hope, be a warning to persons prowling around disturbing their neighbors. We said some weeks ago, that there was cold lead in reserve for them, how nearly we were correct the following will show.

The residence of the late Hon Samuel Pease, now occupied by his surviving children, Mrs Church and Mr Theodore P Pease, has seemed to present special inducement for thieves and ruffians, so much so, that since the 4th of May, scarcely a week has passed that it has not been visited by that class, 'knucks' one or more times, as was ascertained by the testimony before the coroner's jury. Mr Pease has found it necessary not only to ask for special police, but to solicit young gentlemen of his acquaintance to stay at his house over night, for the purpose of affording protection to the inmates. About the 26th ult he drove away one or more of the gang of theives that had been disturbing him, and but for a defective percussion cap on his fire arms would have brought down one at least.

On Friday night near eleven o'clock, as Mrs Church, Mr Pease, and Mrs T A Ricks were about to retire and were in the room on the lower floor, north of the setting room, in the south east corner of the main building, making arrangements for their protection, Mrs Church threw open the window blinds of the only window in the room, and which looks out on Cedar street, and as she did so distinctly heard the footsteps of a person retiring from the immediate neighborhood of the premises. She then remarked audibly that if anybody came they would have a lively time, and closed the blinds preparatory to retiring; in a few moments the blinds were heard to move and it was evident some one was at work at them on the outside. Her brother was armed with a Derringer pistol, and immediately took his seat in the northwest corner of the room, about two feet north of the window, Mrs Church sitting on the bed, and Mrs Ricks on a chair nearly opposite to the window. The person moving the blinds continued operations, and Mr Pease reaching south just past the window casing, with a white window curtain before his face, fired a random shot not knowing who was there, or if any one was there, not knowing his position. On going out immediately the body of John Fisher, one of the employees of Russell & Co., in the foundery, and a member of one of the fire companies in this city, was found dead on the premises of Mrs Church and Mr Pease with the ball fired from the Derringer lodged in his brain. It entered about an inch above the eyebrow and found a stopping place somewhere in the cranial cavity. He had fallen on the identical spot where he stood, and from appearances died without a struggle. The body was removed to his residence in the fourth ward, and on Saturday, the third inst, an inquest was held by coroner Dewalt, and the jury returned the following verdict:

We, the undersigned jurors impannelled and sworn on the third day of July, A D 1869, at the city of Massillon, in the county of Stark, and state of Ohio, by Daniel Dewalt, coroner of said Stark county, to inquire and true presentment make in what manner, and by whom, John Fisher, whose body was found on the premises of Francis P. Church and Theodore P. Pease, in the city of Massillon, came to his death. After having heard the evidence and examined the body of said John Fisher, we do find that the said deceased came to his death by means of a leaden ball, commonly called a Minnie cartridge, fired, discharged and shot at him, the said John Fisher, out of and from a pistol, commonly called a Derrenger pistol, by Theodore P Pease, commonly called Percy Pease, which ball so shot, discharged and fired as aforesaid, entered the left frontal bone of him, the said John Fisher, about one inch above the orbital process, and a little to the right of the center of the bone, lodging in the cranial cavity, and producing instant death, and was so discharged as aforesaid by said Theodore P Pease, at sundry and divers persons to him, said Theodore P Pease, then and there unknown, and then and there unlawfully being on the said premises of said Frances P Church and said Theodore P Pease, in the city of Massillon, in the night season of said second day of July, A D 1869, to wit: about the hour of 11 o'clock, p m; and that at the time he, said Theodore P Pease, did so fire and discharge said pistol, he, said Theodore P Pease, was within the dwelling house on the said premises of him the said Theodore P Pease and said Frances P Church, and that he, said Theodore P Pease, was then in the enjoyment and possession of said premises and was then and there protecting the same.

ROBERT H. FOLGER,
WILLIAM F. RICKS,
GUSTAVUS P. REED,
C. N. OBERLIN,
EDWARD B. UPHAM,
CHARLES U. BURRESS.

From the above verdict that the jury carefully avoided expressing any opinion as to a justifiable homicide, and have made recommendations in regard to arresting Mr Pease, or any other person connected with the killing of Fisher, the logical conclusion to be drawn from the verdict is that they regarded it a justifiable homicide, as will everybody familiar with the facts.

A description of the premises will aid much in arriving at a correct conclusion as to the position of the parties. When Main street was graded, some thirty years ago, it left the building about seven feet above the street. On the grading of Cedar street which crosses Main at right angles the same result was produced, the grade running out on Cedar street at the north side of the building Instead of a sidewalk on Cedar street a terrace has been left as high as the top of the cellar wall, evidently with a view of supporting it, the terrace being supported by a wall built in the street, leaving six feet in width attached to the premises from two feet to six feet in height, and inaccessible except by climbing a perpendicular stone wall, except at the north end where the grade runs out and where there is a flight of stone steps four in number, each from eight to twelve inches high. From the top step access to the surface of the ground above described is easy, but where no man not an occupant of the building would be likely to get at 11 o'clock at night on any proper business. On the top of this terrace at that time of night, directly under Mrs Church's window, the dead body of Fisher was found after the shot was fired.

What business had he there? When that question is properly answered some light may be thrown upon the affair. There is no theory that can be raised justifying his right to be there that is in any degree consistent with honesty of purpose. Unfortunate as is the affair in any aspect in which it may be viewed we are constrained to say that the deceased only got what he contracted for in thus disturbing his neighbors in the quiet and peaceful enjoyment of their homes.

SAD ACCIDENT.—We have rarely been called on to record the history of so sad an accident as one which occurred on Saturday last, and which resulted, we fear, in fatally injuring one of the most promising young men in this city. We have not sought out the details—the general fact is enough. On Saturday last, while Dr Per Lee Pease, son of Anson Pease, Esq., in company with several other young men were using fire arms of various kinds in shooting birds and at a mark, a pistol in the hands of Mr. J. D. Lockwood was accidentally discharged, and the contents, consisting of a ball, lodged in the body of Dr Pease entering low down in the back and near the spine. The surgeons have not been able to ascertain the precise track of the ball—enough is known, however, to excite the most painful apprehensions for the Dr's safety. The best surgical attendance has been secured and is constant, but as present advised we are unable to say any thing encouraging Dr Pease was about completing his professional studies with A Metz, M D of this city, and gave promise of great usefulness. Should the worst fears be realized he will be greatly missed at the parental home and in society where he is a general favorite.

Prof. Henkle, superintendent of the Salem schools for the last five or six years, and one of the ablest and most successful educators of Ohio, was a few days ago, appointed school commissioner of this state by Gov Hayes, to fill the place of Mr Norris, recently resigned The governor has made a most excellent selection, for probably no man stands higher than Mr H in his profession, and so far as he is concerned, the general managment of Ohio schools could not be put in better hands.

We had no Fourth of July here—that is, none of an organized character. On the 3d—last Saturday—Young America burned the usual amount of crackers. As Sunday was the 4th all busines places were closed—excepting the back doors of doggeries. On Monday evening, however, the stores were closed, and the Canton band favored our citizens with some of their fine music, which was duly appreciated by them.

Prof. A. Beuter, long and familiarly known here as a successful music teacher and who has been engaged in the same profession at the Beaver Female Academy, accompainied by his wife, daughter Mr. I. Nettleton, are here at present on a visit to their former home. Many friends welcome them. The seminary with which Mr. B. is connected appears to be in a flourishing condition.

The temperance meeting and picnic, on last Saturday, at Lawrence, was a pleasant and successful gathering of the friends of the cause. A large number of the people of the neighborhood was present, in a beautiful grove south of the town, where a stand for speakers and seats for people were prepared. Although the day was hot, it was pleasant in that grove, where plenty of fresh air and good cold water were in abundance. Some of the speakers who were expected could not be present, but their places were well filled by Mr McHenry, a young man from Canton, and Rev Mr Lynch, of Massillon, who secured the attention of the audience while discussing the great principles of temperance, taking high, radical ground, and earnestly presenting the claims of the cause on the attention of every good citizen. The meeting will have a good effect, for many who were not connected with any of the temperance organizations were present in addition to the Good Templar forces who were visible everywhere with their emblems and regalia. The Orrville band and a select choir of good singers interested their hearers with several pieces of choice music.

A few days since a little son of Mr George Merwin, of this place, accidentally fell head foremost, unseen by anybody, into a spring, which consisted of a barrel placed in the ground, filled with fresh, running water. With rare presence of mind for a child, and an energy which would become one of more advanced years, he managed to get out of his dangerous predicament by promptly seizing the edge of the vessel, and placed himself an dry land without suffering the least injury. When out, however, he let his mother, who was not aware of his whereabouts, know that he could make a noise which he did most vigorously for a short time—for then he seemed to realize his escape from almost certain death.

The Kidneys.

THE KIDNEYS.—THE KIDNEYS are two in number, situated at the upper part of the loin, surrounded by fat, and consisting of three parts, viz: the anterior, the interior, and the exterior. The interior absorbs. Interior consists of tissues or veins, which serve as a deposit for the urine and convey it to the exterior. The exterior is a conductor also, terminating in a single tube, and called the Ureter. The ureters are connected with the bladder.

The bladder is composed of various coverings or tiseues divided into parts, viz: The Upper the Lower, the Nervous and the Mucous, The upper expels, the lower retains. Many have a desire to urinate, without the ability to retain; others urinate without the ability to retain. This frequently occurs in children. To cure these affections we must bring into action the muscles, which are engaged in their various functions. If they are neglected, Gravel or Dropsy may ensue.

The reader must also be made aware, that however slight the attack it is sure to affect the bodily health and mental powers, as our health and blood are supported from these sources.

GOUT OR RHEUMATISM.—Pain occurring in the loins is indicative of the above diseases. They occur in persons disposed to acid stomach and chalky concretions.

THE GRAVEL.—The Gravel ensues from neglect or improper treatment of the kidneys. These organs being weak the water is not expelled from the bladder but allowed to remain: it becomes feverish and sediment forms. It is from this deposit that the stone is formed and gravel ensues.

DROPSY is a collection of water in some parts of the body, and bears different names according to the parts affected, viz: when generally diffused over the body it is called Anascarca; when of the abdomen, Ascites: when of the chest, Hydrothorax.

TREATMENT.—Helmbold's highly concentrated compound Extract Buchu is decidedly one of the best remedies for diseases of the bladder kidneys, gravel, dropsical swellings, rheumatism and gouty affections. Under this head we have arranged Dysuria, or difficulty and pain in passing water, scanty secretion, or small and frequent discharges of water. Strangury or stoppage of water; Hematuria, or bloody urine: Gout and Rheumatism of the kidneys without any change in quantity, but increase of color, or dark water. It has always highly recommended by the late Dr Physick in those affections.

This medicine increases the power of digestion, and excites the absorbents into healthy exercise, by which the watery or calcarous depositions and all unnatural enlargements, as well as pain and inflamation are reduced, and it is taken by men, women and children. Directions for use and diet accompany,

Philadelphia, Pa. Feb. 25, 1867.

H T HELMBOLD, Druggis:—Dear Sir—I have been a sufferer for upward of twenty years with gravel, bladder and kidney affections, during which time I have used various medicinal preparations, and been under treatment of the most eminent physicians experiencing but little relief.

Having seen your preparations extensively advertised I consulted with my family physician in regard to using your Extract Buchu. I did this because I had used all kinds of advertised remedies, and had found them worthless, and some quite injurious; in fact, I despaired of ever getting well, and determined to use no remedies hereafter, unless I knew of the ingredients. It was this that prompted me to use your remedy. As you advertised that it was composed of buchu, cubebs and juniper berries, it occurred to me and my physician as an excellent combination, and, with his advice, after an examination of the article, and consulting again with the druggist I concluded to try it. I commenced its use about eight months ago at which time I was confined to my room. From the first bottle I was astonished and gratified at the beneficial effect, and after using it three weeks was enabled to walk out. I felt much like writing you a full statement of my case at that time, but thot my improvement might only be temporary, and therefore concluded to defer and see if it would effect a perfect cure, knowing then it would be of greater value to you, and more satisfactory to me.

I am now able to report that a cure is effected after using the remedy for five months. I have not used any now for three months, and feel as well in all respects as I ever did. Your buchu being devoid of any unpleasant taste and odor, a nice tonic and invigorator of the system, I do not mean to be without it whenever occasion may require its use in such affections. M McCORMICK.

Nature is the Great Physician.

This is now admitted by the medical profession as a funyamental principle of healing science. It is wisely provided by the human economy that whenever anything is wrong in the physical system the natural forces of the body are brought to bear to expel the disease. The great aim, therefore, is to strengthen the natural powers. This has been kept in view by the skillfull compounders of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which operates to give fresh vitality to all the organs of the body. The effect of this medicine upon the stomach, the liver and and the kidneys, is prompt and decisive. The patient who is wise enough to quit drugging and try the bitters, soon feels as though he had taken a new lease of life, and as he continues the use of the article, he is overjoyed to find the streams of health coursing through his veins. It is prepared with great care; and its component parts are entirely vegetable. It is free from the objections so often urged adsinst preparations of the kind. As a medical agent it has no equal, while its pleasing flavor and healthful effects have made it a general favorite. It is free from all the properties calculated to impair the system, and its operations are at once mild, soothing and efficient. All who have used Hostetter's stomach bitters attest its virtues.

Even those who are in the enjoyment of perfect health foequently have need to have recourse to tonics as preventatives of of disease. We are never too well armed against the assaults of the ills that flesh is heir to. In health or sickness this tonic cannot be taken regularly without giving vitality and elasticity to the system. 306-4w

Throat and Lung Diseases.

Pine Tree Tar Cordial.

It is the vital principle of the Pine Tree, obtained by a peculiar process in the distillation of tar, by which its highest medical properties are retained.

It is the only safeguard and reliable remedy which has ever been prepared from the juice of the pine tree.

It invigorates the digestive organs and restores the appetite.

It strengthens the debilitated system

It purifies and enriches the blood, and expels from the system the corruption which scrofula breeds on the hands

It dissolves the viscous or phlegm which stops the air passages of the lungs.

Its healing principle acts upon the irritated surface of the lungs and throat, protecting the tender diseased part, relieving pain and subduing inflammation.

It is the result of years of study and experiment, and it is offered to the afflicted with the positive assurance of its power to cure the following diseases, if the patient has not too long delayed to resort to the means of cure.—

Consumption of the Lungs, Cough, Sore Throat, and Bronchitis, Liver Complaint, Bleeding Piles, Asthma, Whooping Cough, Diptheria &c.

We are often asked why we not other remedies in the market for consumption as cheap, and which put up in as attractive a form to sell? We answer, by stopping a cough, by loosening and assisting nature to throw off the unhealthy matter collected in the throat and bronchial tubes, causing irritation and cough.

2d. Most throat and lung troubles originate from a neglect of a cough, which if duly attended to by the use of Wishart's Pine Tree Tar Cordial, would be entirely broken up, the irritable tissues restored and healthy secretions established, and the patient saved from the fearful consequences that follow.

If the time has Tar Cordial will not benefit, it does not the investment, as it is the purest and most concentrated Tar Cordial in the market, and is not the large bottle and three doses a day, thereby assisting the secretions, and purify the blood thus scientifically making the cure perfect.

Dr Wishart has given away hundreds and thousands of testimonials of cures from men and women of unquestionable character who were considered given up to die, but through the providence of God were completely restored to health by the Pine Tree Tar Cordial. A physician of better standing can be consulted on the subject. Sent by express on receipt of price. Address I. Q Wishart & Co No 232 North 2d Street, Philadelphia, Pa. 306-3m fortunes that but few of them observed the demonstrations of Captain Hugg's passion. That gallant son of Neptune rose slowly to his feet, convulsed with the throes of a mighty sympathy, and with tearful eyes and bated breath listened to Jane's pitiful story. When at length, she dropped to the ground, seemingly in the last extremity of exhausted nature, the captain's compassion reached its climax. He sprang from to the stage, rushed to the actress, bent over her prostrate form, jerked from his pocket his capacious wallet, tore it open with trembling fingers, exposing to view its piled up treasure, and exclaimed in a voice choked with sobs and tremulous with unfeigned emotion—

"Look up, Mistress Shore, look up! By G—d madame, you shan't starve while I've a Baltimore and Ohio railroad shinplaster in my pocket-book."

What followed beggars description. For a moment the vast audience remained hushed, as if from involuntary admiration of the big-hearted sailor's generosity and gallantry. Then, as the ludicrousness of the scene seemed to flash suddenly upon them, there arose such a clamor of stamping feet, clapping of hands, pounding of canes, shouts, roars, yells, shrieks and screams of laughter, as never before or since shook the walls of any theater.

In the midst of the uproar manager Wemyss made his appearance, politely explained to the captain that Mistress Shore's wants would be ministered to, and succeeded in leading him off the stage.

Several ineffectual attempts were made to proceed with the tragedy, but the audience was too thoroughly imbued with the mirth occasioned by the sailor's illusion to settle down to anything serious. Each attempt of Mrs. Shore to regain their lost attention was only greeted with renewed convulsions of laughter and cries for Captain Hugg The shrewd manager only succeeded in restoring a semblance of order by starting the orchestra in full blast and "ringing on" the ballet, after which a roaring farce was tolerated.—From SPERRY'S Reminiscences of the Drama, in Packard's Monthly, for July.

A Street Arab.

RAGGED the jacket and trowsers he wears.
Ragged the shoes on his feet;
For shoe or jacket little he cares,
This Arab of the street.
Pitching pennies here in the park
Along with the noisy crowd.
All of them dirty and ragged like him.
Wrangling and shouting aloud.

I wonder whether he has a home,
This ragged urchin, and how
He earn's the coppers he's tossing there
With those other Arabs now;
If mother or brother or sister has he,
If ever a father he knew;
If he sleeps in a bed like you and me,
And eats as the rest of us do?

Scarcely human he seems, somehow,
With his semi savage shout,
As he gives each nickel a curious toss,
And capers wildly about.
Yet the same God made him that made us all,
The God that dwells above,
Who watches even the sparrow's fall,
In the fullness of his love.

All at once, as twelve o'clock draws near,
Our Arab leaves his play,
Gathers together what nickles are his,
And suddenly darts away.
A moment more and his shrill voice sounds
Shouting the news in the street,
With fifty more like a pack of hounds,
Following close at his feet.

In and out of the cars he springs,
He heeds neither hoofs no wheels;
His ragged feet seem gifted with wings,
Like famous Mercury's heels:
Now he stops a moment a paper to sell
To some one passing by,
Then away he goes on a rapid run,
With a wild halloo and cry.

High up past the dizzy roofs his voice
Ascends on its skyward way;
A moving shadow he flits along
In the garish light of day,
Twixt the rows of buildings on either side
With their windows, staring down
Like so many giants, Argus-eyed,
Sleeplessly watching the town.

I wonder if ever in thought he sees
The rows of buildings fade,
If ever in fancy he conjures up
The desert without shade?
If ever, winding before his sight,
Long caravans appear,
If the Bedouin chiefs of the sands he sees
In himself and these others here?

For me to day as I stand in the park,
Watching them here at their play,
Like a bright mirage, in the distance seen,
Seem the buildings on Broadway;
And I almost forgot that this half-tamed boy,
With the ragged shoes on his feet,
Is not the scheik of some wandering tribe,
But an Arab of the street.

Widows.

The following is taken from Dickens' "Master Humphrey's Clock," reprinted by Hurd & Houghton.

"Afore the governor withdraws," said Mr Weller, 'there is a pint respectin vich Sammy has a question to ask. Vile that question is a perwadin this here conversation, p'raps the gen'lman will permit me to retire."

"Wot are you going for?" demanded Sam, seizing his father by the coat-tails.

"I never see such an undootiful boy as you, Samivel,' returned Mr Weller. 'Didn't you make a solemn promise, amountin almost to a speeches o' vow, that you'd put that ere question on my account?'

'Well, I'm agreeable to do it,' said Sam, 'but not if you go scuttin away like that, as the bull turned round and mildly observed to the drover, ven they was goadin him into the butcher's door. The fact is sir,' said Sam, addressing me, 'that he wants to know somethin respectin that ere lady as is housekeeper here.'

'Ay. What is that?'

'Vy, sir,' said Sam, grinning still more, 'he vishes to know vether—"

'In short,' interposed old Mr. Weller, decisively, a perspiration breaking out upon his forehead, 'vether that ere old creeter is or is not a widder.'

Mr. Pickwick laughed heartily, and so did I, as I replied decisively, that 'my housekeeper was a spinster.'

'There!' cried Sam, 'now you're satisfied. You hear she's a spinster.'

'A wot!' said his father, with deep scorn.

'A spinster,' said Sam.

Mr Weller looked very hard at his son for a minute or two, and then said—

'Never mind vether she makes jokes or not, that's no matter. Wot I say is, is that ere female a widder, or is she not?'

'Wot do you mean by her making jokes?' demanded Sam, quite aghast at the obscurity of his father's speech.

'Never you mind, Samivel,' returned Mr Weller gravely: 'puns may be very good things or they may be very bad ones, and a female may be none the better and she may be none the vurse for making of em; that's got nothing to do vith widders.'

'Wy, now,' said Sam, looking round, 'would anybody believe that a man at his time o' life could be running his head agin spinsters and punsters being the same thing?'

'There aint a straw's difference between 'em," said Mr Weller. "Your father didn't drive a coach for so many years, not to be ekal to his own langvidge so far as that goes, Sammy.'

Avoiding the question of etymology, upon which the old gentlemans mind was made up, he was several times assured that his housekeeder had never been married. He expressed great satisfaction on hearing this, and apologized for the question, remarking that he had been greatly terrified by a widow not long before, and that his natural timidity was increased in consequence.

"It wos on the rail,' said Mr Weller, with strong emphasis; 'I was goin down to Birmingham by the rail, and and I wos locked up in a close carriage with a living widder. Alone we wos; the widder and me wos alone; and I believe it was only because we was alone and there wos no clergyman in the conwayance that that ere widder didn't marry me before we reached the half way station. Ven I think how she begun a screemin as we wos goin under them tunnels in the dark—how she kept on a fainting and holding on to me—and how I tried to bust open the door as wos tight locked and prewented all escape—Ah! It was a awful thing, most awful!"

Mr. Weller was so very much overcome by this ret ospect that he was unable, until he had wiped his brow several times, to reply to the question whether he approved of railway communication, notwithstanding that it would appear from the answer which he ultimately gave, that he entertained strong opinions on that subject.

"I consider,' said Mr Weller, 'that the rail unconstitutional and an invader o' priwileges, and I should werry much like to know what that 'ere old Carter as once stood up for our liberties and wun 'em too—I should like to know wat he would say if he wos alive now, to Englishmen being locked up with widders, or anybody, agin their wills. Wot a old Carter would have said, a old Coachman may say, and I assert in that pint o' view alone, the rail is an invader. As to comfort, vere's the comfort o' sittin in a barm cheer lookin at brick walls or heaps o' mud, never comin to a public house, never seein a glass o' ale, never goin through a pike, never meetin a change o' no kind (horses or othervise,) but always comin to a place, ven you come to one at all, the werry pieter o' the last, vith the same p'leeseman standing about, the same blessed old bell a ringin, the same unfort'nate people stand in behind the bars, a waitin to be let in; and everythin the same thing except the name, vich is wrote up in the same sized letters as the last name, and vith the same colors. As to the honor and dignity o' travelin vere can [illegible] be vithout a coachman, and wot's the rail to sich coachmen and guards as is sometimes forced to go by it, but a outrage and a insult? As to the pace, wot sort o' pace do you think I, Tony Veller, could have kept a coach goin at, for five hundred thousand pound a mile, paid in advance afore the coach was on the road? As to the ingein—a nasty, wheezin, creakin, gaspin, puffin, thustin monster, always out 'o' breath, vith a shiny, green and gold back, like a unpleasant beetle in that 'ere gas magnifier—as to the ingein as is always a poutin out red hot coals at night, and black smoke in the day, the sensiblest thing it does in my opinion, is, ven there's somethin in the vay, and it sets up that ere frightful screem vich seems to say: 'Now here's two hundred and forty passengers in the wery greatest extremity o' danger, and here's their two hundred and forty screams in vun?"

Natural History.

It is not the most deliteful tax tew write the natral history ov the Louse, there is enny quantity ov thorobred folks, who would konsider it a kontaminashun, az black az patent leather, to say louse, or even think louse, but a louse is a fakt, and aul folks are never more at home, nor more unwilling to move, than when they git into the head. The louse is one ov the gems ov antiquity. They are worn in the hair, and are more ornamental than useful.

Not having enny encyclopedia from which to sponge mi informashun, and then pass it oph for my own creashun, I shall be forced while talking about the louse, "tew fight it out on the line" ov observashun, and when mi knowledge and experience gives out, I shall tap mi imaginashun ov which I have a crude supply.

Book educashun is a phatting thing. Is makes a man stick out with other folks' opinyuns, and is a good thing to make the vulgar roll up the white ov their eyes, and wonder how enny man could kno so much wisdom.

Schooling, when I was a colt, didn't he round so loose as it does now, and learning was picked up oftener by running yure head aginst a stun wall, than by any other kind ov mineralogy.

I have studied botany all day in a flat meadow, pulling cowslips for greens, and then classified them by picking them over and gitting them reddy for the pot.

All the astronomy i ever got i larnt in spearing suckers by moon ite, and mi geology culminated at the further end of a wood chuck's hole, especially if i got the woodchuck.

As for moral philosophy and rhetorick, it iz the science of hooking green apples and water melons thirty years ago, and being awful sorry for it now, i am head in that class.

But this iz all remote from the louse.

The louse iz a familiar animal, very sedentary in his habits, not apt tew git lost. They kan be cultivated without the aid of a guide-book, and with half a chance will multiply and thicken as much as pimples on the goose.

There iz no ground so fruitful for the full development ov this little domestic collateral az a distsict school house, and while the young idea is breaking its shell, and playing hide and go seek on the inside ov the urchin's skull, the louse is playing tag on the outside, and quite often gets on the school mam.

I hav alwuz had a hi venerashun for the louse, not bekause i konsider them ez enny evidence of genius, or even neatness, but bekause they remind me ov my boyhood's innocence, the days away back in the alphabet of memory, when i set on the flatt side ov a slab bench, and spelt out Webster with one hand, and stirred the top ov mi head with the other.

Philosophically handled, the louse are gregarious, and were a complete success at one time in Egypt, bible historians don't hesitate to say, that tha were aul the rage at that time, the whole crust of the earth simmered and boiled with them, like a pot ov steaming flax seed, they were a drug in the market.

But this was more louse than was necessary or pleasant, and was a punishment fur sum sin, and ain't spoke ov az a matter tew brag on.

The louse are all well enuff in their place, and for the sake ov variety, perhaps a few ov them are just az good az more wovld be.

They were designed for some wize purpose, and for that reason, are respectabel.

When, (in the lapse of time,) it cums tew be revealed to us, that a single louse, chewing away on the summit ov Daniel Webster's head, when he was a little schoolboy, waz the telegraphic tutch tew the wire that bust the first idee in his brain, we shall see wisdom in the louse, and shant stick up our noze, until we turn a back summersett at these venerable soldjers, in the grand army of progression.

After we hav reached years of discretion, and we have got our educashun, and our karacters have got developing, and we begin to hold offis, and are elected justis of the peace, for instance, and don't seem to need enny more louse to stir us up, it is time enuff then to be sassy to them.

As for me, there is only one piece (thus far) of vital creation, that I actually hate, and that is a bed-bug. I simply dispize snaiks, fear musketoze, avoid fleas, don't associate with the cockroach, go round toads, back out square for a hornet.

Nevertheless, moreover, to wit, I must say, even at this day of refinement, and bell-letters, I do actually luv to stand on tip toe and see a romping, red-cheeked, blue-eyed boy chased up stairs and then down stairs, and then out in the garden, and finally caught and throwed, and held firmly between his mother's kneeze, and see an old, warped, fined tooth horn comb go and come, half buried through a flood of lawless hair, and drag each trip to the light, a fat and lively louse—and, in conclusion, to hear him pop as mother pins him with her thum nail fast tew the centre of the comb, fills me plum up to the brim with something, i don't know what the feeling iz; perhaps sumbody out ov a job can tell me.—Josh Billings.
